Abstract

According to the "European Agency for Safety and Health at Work" each year more than 5,500 people die in a fatal occupational accident in the EU. And it's being estimated that each year in the EU 160,000 people die as a result of an occupational disease.

If we in Europe should all work healthy and safe without occupational accidents and illnesses, the savings would go up to 500 billion Euro per year. So that even could make an immediate end to the European economic crisis.

What are the lessons learned from others, who paid a huge price? What can we learn from successful occupational safety development programs? What are the roles and characteristics of successful leaders in Health & Safety? How about process safety? What is your role in this field as a leader?

Do you dare to ask yourself some challenging and self-reflecting questions? You can make the difference!
